Two or Three Generations HKU?

With over 90 years of history, HKU and its graduates have had a deep impact on society. This history and heritage is also rooted in the many families who have had members of different generations study at the University. Three or two generations of a family attending the same university is very special indeed. In the coming issue, we will bring the tales of families who have achieved that special recognition of “Two and Three Generations HKU”.

The Alumni Office is grateful to the many alumni who have generously contributed their precious family photos, documents and efforts in providing family trees.

We are still eagerly looking for more stories of “Two and Three Generations HKU”. A photo and a short paragraph will be very useful. Please kindly send to us by

Friendship starts from the International Youth Summit

Patricia Cheng
(Year 2 Student, currently in exchange in France)

I never thought that I could visit Egypt, not only as a tourist, but to also visit friends there.

The HKU International Youth Summit 2001 (a 90th Anniversary programme held during Summer 2001) successfully served as a meeting point for over 150 youths coming from more than 30 countries. It is where we began our discussions and exchanges in sustainable development. It is also where we started our friendship.

For the past few months, we have never been short of news and talks on acts of terrorism carried out by the fundamentalist Islamic militant groups. It seems that all the people from the Arab world are terrorists or extremists. Thanks to the Egyptian team from the American University in Cairo, their families and friends, I have realised the unfairness of this generalisation to the ordinary people.

I stayed in Cairo for a week with Nagia's family. Nagia, Heba, Rihab, Karim and Khaled took turns to be my chauffeur and showed me around. I was also introduced to their families and friends. The most wonderful of all is that I attended an Islamic wedding ceremony in a mosque.

I never thought that a strong bond could be built between us in such a short time. Everything was so hectic during the International Youth Summit and we could not have a good chat. But then I was so welcomed to visit Egypt, their families and friends.

I was quite famous among their friends, as my pictures and happenings of the Summit were widely circulated in their computer lab. I was charmed by their hospitality. Everyone was so nice to me, even strangers in the streets smiled to me. It made me really sad when I found myself among the very few tourists in Cairo. How could we label people just because a few among them have done something bad? The people I met are all beautiful, faithful to their religion, no matter it is Islam or Christianity and respectful to others'. Perhaps Egypt is underdeveloped, its people still have a simple mind and lead a simple life, which we have lost long time ago. How could a civilisation like this fire up conflicts with another? A civilisation cannot be harmful in itself. What is harmful is people's perception.

The trip opened my mind. I was not merely a tourist. I am glad that I have met some of the well-educated people in Egypt. But at the same time, I feel sad about its wealth gap. One issue about sustainable development is to reduce the poverty and the inequality. Certainly, the country has a long and difficult journey before everyone can enjoy the beauty of nature. I treasured every moment in the Summit and my first trip to Egypt and above all, the friendship among people across the globe. The Youth Summit did physically end, but our quest for a sustainable future does go on.

The writer (1st right) had dinner with Heba (2nd right) and her family in Alexandria. She stayed with them for a night.

Poets get Moving

Presented by the English Department and co-organised with the Standing Committee on Language Education and Research (SCOLAR) with the support of the Language Fund, creative writing workshops were held with a group of Hong Kong's foremost poets for over 150 Hong Kong primary and secondary students.

A poetry collection, published by HKU Press

With the support of the University Grants Committee, the next "Moving Poetry" will be launched in April 2002. The extended project will involve even more students and teachers. "Hopefully poem-writing will penetrate the school curriculum and teachers will be interested in teaching the craft and perceiving it differently," said Dr Page Richards, the Project Artistic Director.

The Lugard Tribute

The Tribute, an intricately embroidered silk banner was presented to Sir Frederick Lugard, the first Chancellor (1911-1912), of the University and the governor of Hong Kong (1907-1912) by a group of Chinese merchants in 1910, in recognition of his contribution towards the establishment of HKU. Returned to HKU by Sir Frederick's family, The Tribute is currently exhibited in the University Museum and Art Gallery on permanent loan.

Silver hanging brackets in the form of bats.

The lid of the casket is embellished with four Chinese characters 「德蔭香江」, meaning "Virtue shadows over Hong Kong" (「以德行護蔭香港」). In the centre of the lid appears a silver monogram of Lugard's initials. On the underside of the lid is a painting on silk, depicting a classical scene.

“The centre piece of the satin scroll, framed by a gold border, is the text of the message to Lugard and a list of the 87 donors who contributed to the cost of producing The Tribute. The positions or affiliations of all but two of these 87 donors have been identified.

Fifty-two donors to The Tribute were also members of the Hong Kong University Chinese Fund-Raising Sub-Committee, and 53 of them made personal contributions of between $100 and $50000 to the Hong Kong Endowment Fund...

The Tribute as found in 2001 appears to be complete and nearly in as pristine condition in all aspects, as it was on April 28, 1910.”

Hong Kong – Shanghai Forum 新雙城記

The Faculty of Business & Economics organised a Business & Economics Forum titled “Hong Kong – Shanghai: Partners or Competitors? 合縱連橫” on December 17, 2001.

The Forum, with speakers including Professor Richard Y C Wong 王于漸, Mr Vincent H C Cheng 鄭海泉, Dr Victor K K Fung 馮國經, Mr Dai Liu 戴柳, Mr Andrew L T Sheng 沈聯濤, Professor Michael Enright & Professor Leo O F Lee 李歐梵, attracted hundreds of guests from the community.

90th Anniversary Party

December 7, 2001 being the last day of classes for the semester, the 90th Anniversary Lunch Party was held at Sun Yat-sen Place for students and staff of the University. Apart from the delicious food, distribution of lai sees, hitting the “勁過gong”, everyone enjoyed performances given by the Union Orchestra, HKU Students’ Chinese Orchestra, “unplugged” pop singing from Wei Lun Hall, Music Department’s Jazz band caroling and folk songs sung by Mr Benny Tai of the Law Department.

From a student:

“It emphasised on music, which is, I think, appropriate for such a function. The Associate Professor, Benny Tai, the one carrying the guitar, did a great job. You know, it’s indeed rare to see teachers or lecturers of HKU performing in public.”
